Eco Corner—

Choose Green: Bike, Bus or Walk Instead of Driving

Looking to cut your carbon footprint? Swapping your car for a bike, public transport or a walk can make a big difference. In New Zealand, transport accounts for nearly half of our CO<sub>2</sub> emissions from energy use. Every trip you take without a car helps reduce air pollution, eases traffic congestion, and lowers greenhouse gas emissions. Cycling and walking also boost your physical and mental health, while public transport is an efficient, low-emission way to get around—especially when more of us use it. Small changes in your routine can have a lasting impact. Let's make our communities cleaner, quieter, and more sustainable — one trip at a time.
